This inspection

The effectiveness of the home and the progress and experiences of children and young people since the most recent full inspection

This home was judged good at the last full inspection. At the interim inspection, Ofsted judges that it has sustained effectiveness.

Children are well supported and the care that they receive is making a positive difference to their lives. Staff demonstrate a good understanding of each child and are committed to helping them to achieve their full potential and have fun. Children enjoy coming to spend time at this home and they make good progress. Close, caring relationships with the staff help the children to feel safe.

Some children's needs arising from culture, faith, religion and ethnicity and dietary requirements have not been fully met. Children of Muslim faith, and who have regular stays at the home, mainly receive vegetarian meals, despite not being vegetarian. Some children have gluten-free diets. This has resulted in other children staying during the same period receiving gluten-free meals. As a result, the children have not been supported to have a choice. This shortfall was raised as a requirement at previous inspections.

The home is adequately decorated and furnished and is clean and tidy. However, the children's bedrooms lack warmth and colour. Bedrooms are clinical in their appearance and lack accessories and furniture. Some bedrooms are in need of redecoration, and walls throughout the home are bare. Staff try to be creative, making pictures; however, these do not stay in place for long. Overall, the children's bedrooms and some parts of the home do not present as a child-friendly, welcoming or a homely environment. This shortfall was raised as a requirement at previous inspections.

Daily routines are strongly adhered to and they provide stability and structure for the children. Behaviour management plans and strategies are known and, in time, understood by the children. As a result, the children are safe and feel secure and protected both in and outside the home. The children gain an understanding of their behaviours and opportunities to develop positive coping strategies.

There have been no incidents of children going missing from the home. The use of sanctions is minimal and proportionate to the behaviour. There have been four physical interventions since the last inspection. When physical restraint is used, the records of the incidents do not contain the information required. There is no date of when the intervention took place, no name of the child and the views of the staff and children involved are not always recorded. This shortfall was raised as a recommendation at the last inspection.

The manager's practice is child-centred and makes the children's needs her highest priority. She has a good relationship with the staff and the children, with whom she spends time daily.

The registered manager works hard to establish and maintain good working relationships with families and with other professionals. A social worker was very complimentary about the support that the manager and the staff team provided in an emergency. The social worker said that the support went over and above expectations and had a significant impact on a child's well-being, giving the child stability during a difficult time in their life.

Monthly staff team meetings cover all aspects of practice and how to develop the staff further and use their strengths. There have been opportunities to ensure that the staff develop their skills, with individualised training for staff who are progressing in their careers. Eligible staff hold the necessary level 3 qualification in residential care or are working towards it. All the staff attend the organisation's mandatory training.

Staff receive regular supervision and yearly appraisals. Safer recruitment is generally good. However, one member of staff's disclosure and barring information is missing from their recruitment file.

There has been one formal complaint since the last inspection. Although the complaint has been investigated and responded to, there is no record of whether the complainant was satisfied with the conclusion. Without clear records, it is not evident that issues have been addressed appropriately. This shortfall was raised as a requirement at the last inspection.

Monitoring reports written by the independent visitor lack information. The reports do not give a clear overview of the home or reflect the views of the staff and the children. Four visit reports have not been received by the provider or by Ofsted. Therefore, the home is not monitored effectively, and potential shortfalls are not fully identified. This shortfall was raised as a requirement at the last inspection.

The manager has met two of the five requirements and one of the two recommendations raised at the last inspection.

Recommendations

- As set out in regulations 31-33, the registered person is responsible for maintaining good employment practice. They must ensure that recruitment, supervision and performance management of staff safeguards children and minimises potential risks to them. ('Guide to the children's homes regulations including the quality standards', page 61, paragraph 13.)

This in particular reference to the recruitment of staff.
